

Questions, Questions

We are all used to answering questions — or trying to. For a change of pace, try coming up with the questions instead of the answers. Be creative as you think of three questions you could ask to receive each answer below.

Example

The answer is disgusting.

The questions are:

- How do you describe a piece of lasagna that sat, forgotten, in a plastic container at the back of the refrigerator for two months?
- What word describes the frog I had to dissect in biology class?
- How does my mother describe the state of my room whenever she has to go near it?

1. The answer is empty.
2. The answer is red.
3. The answer is scratchy.
4. The answer is puppy.
5. The answer is tired.
6. The answer is wonderful.
7. The answer is commercials.
8. The answer is friends.
9. The answer is not on your life.
10. The answer is questions.
